Wholesalers to Renew Drive For Trade at Lower Prices

Silk and Cotton, Leaders Believe Buyers Cannot Afford to Remain Out of Market Any Longer

Improvement in the volume of silk ousiness, along with the determination of some leaders in the cotton goods trades to make prices soon that will be so low that buyers cannot afford to remain out of the market longer, were the principal developments yesterday in textile centers. A canvass of half a dozen leading houses in the silk production field revealed the fact that a steady improvement has been taking place during the last two or three weeks, that good silks are in better demand, are being bought more freely and are advancing in price.

Specific proof of the latter is contained in the statement of one house that it has advanced its standard crèpe de chine from $1.95 to $2.25 and that its production for the next five weeks is sold up at the latter price. As a contrast, it is mentioned that in July the manufacturer's price on this fabric was $3.30.

A cloud on the horizon is the possiof some leaders in the cotton goods the manufacturer's price on this fabric was $3.30.

A cloud on the horizon is the possibility that the wide publicity given to the fall in prices in the newspapers last week will cause a further hesitancy in consumer demand.

Trade in cotton goods is quiet. It was learned vesterday that a few of the large houses that have not yet made price revisions are contemplating deep cuts in their lists in order to stimulate business. These factors feel that prices considerably below the present market level must be named to bring in the buyers. As demand materializes it is the intention of these trade leaders to advance prices until a new market level is established.

The directors of the Converters' Association yesterday issued a statement calling attention to the price cuts made by converters, which in some cases are by converters, which in some cases are deeper than the one-third reduction made by the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, which precipitated the lower price discussion in the textile field. Say Cotton Goods Are

Below Replacement Value Apparently in an effort to justify their position on the price proposition with the ultimate consumer, the directors of the Converters' Association yesterday issued a statement following a meeting at the organization's headquarters, in which it is asserted that some cotton goods are selling today below replacement costs. The statement says in part:

"If 33 1-3 per cent reduction on the part of a well known cotton goods corporations is the justifiable difference in price between the high and to-day's price, then a like reduction in the price of converted goods ought to be accepted by the trade as the proper variation between the high and to-day's price.

ation between the high and to-day's price.

"Not only has such 33 1-3 per cent reduction been made by the cotton converting trade since last spring, but in many cases a much greater reduction has taken place and not infrequently merchandise is now being sold by them below the cost of replacement.

"The cutter of cotton goods, the jobber, the retailer and the general publit should know that converted cotton goods, sold by cotton converters, are to-day being marketed at such heavy reductions that to-day's prices are as low as they can consistently go.

"These prices are based on lower cost for the gray goods than was fixed by the government at the time of the war, despite the fact that prices of labor are at least 50 per cent above the war period, in some cases very much higher.

"The cotton converters, therefore, feel that the users of their production must realize that the price of their production must

Asserts Cancellation Evil Must Be Halted

Stabilization of business and prices, according to Joseph Berlinger, head of Joseph Berlinger & Co., silk manufacturers, will come only with a greater respect for contracts, even though they entail a loss. In a letter to the Silk Association of America, Mr. Berlinger states that the evil of disregarding contracts has reached an alarming stage. "Every American business man," he writes, "should be made to realize that he must share some of the losses involved in the period of readjustment, and that a contract legitimately entered into between two parties cannot be treated as a scrap of paper. "Confidence, upon which rests the entire economic business structure has been almost destroyed. Repudiation of contracts has been one of the main
